Sponsoring the conference

www.atypi.org

Typography and type design has been at the core of Graphic communication since the early years of printing press when typography was born. Graphic design has been largely based on the use of type as a means for communication.

The theme of the conference — “Typographic Dialogues” — wants to explore the relationships among type design, typography and graphic design, specially in a moment where great technological changes are occurring.

We welcome presentations that deal with all different aspects of type as part of the design culture, specially in those areas where interaction with graphic design is closer. We are grateful to our sponsors, who help us widen access to ATypI by keeping fees down, especially for students and delegates from countries with relatively low per-capital incomes.
